

Galatians 4:21-31

One Point: We are children born through a promise. We are not slaves to a law we cannot keep; we have freedom in a new covenant.

1. If you had to wear a superhero's outfit this week, who's would you choose?

Read v. 4:21

2. If you were standing before God today, would you rather be judged according to the Old Covenant with the law or by the New Covenant and Christ?

3. Is it fair that all of us, no matter our sins, have the same opportunity for grace?

Read v. 4:22-26

4. Paul compared the Judaizers with the story of Hagar and Abram. If you had to pick an Old Testament story to compare your current life circumstances with, which would you pick?

5. How would you compare/contrast the two covenants?

6. Does living according to the new covenant mean your life is going to be easy?

7. How do we navigate being holy without being legalistic?

Main Idea:

- Hagar and Ismael represent slavery and being under the law.
- Sarah and Isaac represent freedom and being a child of the promise.
- Paul is reminding us that we are to live as free people outside of the bondage of slavery.
